This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Rehana once had so much potential—she was top of her high school class, followed the rules, and hung out with the cool girls. Then one day she looked up to find herself in a worn-out rut of a life, scrimping to support her unemployed husband and three kids.

One afternoon, after receiving disappointing news at work, Rehana runs into Shilpi, an old classmate who'd been awkward and overeager, always runner-up, and definitely not cool. But it looks like things have changed for Shilpi, and Shilpi's desire to get reacquainted—and perhaps show off her success—rubs salt in the wounds left by Rehana's failures. Trying to maintain the appearance of a life that resembles the promise of her youth, Rehana struggles to hide the truth. But when she reveals a cruel secret from their past, Shilpi and Rehana will finally face the sharp intersection of memory, pretense, and reality.
