Welfare locale e democrazia partecipativa: La programmazione sociale nei municipi di Roma (Studi e ricerche) (Italian Edition) Massimo Paci

A seguito della Legge 328/2000 di riforma dell'assistenza, che ha stabilito che alla costruzione dei Piani sociali di zona debbano partecipare anche i cittadini e i soggetti della società civile, si è avviato nel settore del welfare locale un processo di innovazione istituzionale, fondato sulla cooperazione tra attori pubblici e privati. Il Comune di Roma, con la delega di competenze ai suoi 19 municipi, rappresenta una delle esperienze più interessanti in questo campo. Nel volume si descrivono dapprima le forme di democrazia partecipativa più importanti in letteratura. Si ricordano poi i passaggi principali del decentramento amministrativo in atto e l'articolazione dei soggetti del Terzo settore. Si espongono infine i risultati di una ricerca condotta presso quattro municipi romani, che ha permesso di individuare alcune caratteristiche di fondo dei differenti modelli di democrazia partecipativa osservati. Nelle conclusioni si sottolinea l'importanza di queste esperienze di democrazia partecipativa in un momento in cui, nel nostro paese, la democrazia rappresentativa appare perdere legittimità sociale.
